The Judicial System of Pakistan

by

Dr Faqir Hussain
Registrar, Supreme Court of Pakistan

1. General

The roots of the current judicial system of Pakistan stretch back to the medieval period and even before. The judicial system that we practice today has evolved over a long period of time, spanning roughly over a whole millennium. The system has passed through several epochs covering the Hindu era, Muslim period including the Mughal dynasty, British colonial period and post-independence period. Notwithstanding the successive changes i.e. one rule/dynasty substituted by the other, which naturally resulted in the socio-economic and political transformation of the Indian society, the judicial system generally maintained a steady growth and gradual advance towards consolidation and improvement/refinement, without indeed, having to undergo any major disruption or substantial change. All in all, the system experienced and passed through 3 distinct stages of historical development, namely, Hindu Kingdom, Muslim Rule and British Colonial administration. The 4th and current era, commenced with the partition of India and the establishment of Pakistan as a sovereign and independent State. The system, thus, has evolved through a process of reform and development. This conclusion enjoys near unanimity among historians and commentators of Indian legal history. During this process of evolution and growth, the judicial system did receive influences and inspirations from foreign doctrines/notions and indigenous norms/practices, both in terms of organising courts' structure and hierarchy, and adopting procedures/practices in reaching decisions. Therefore, the present judicial system is not an entirely foreign transplant, as is commonly alleged, but has acquired an indigenous flavour and national colour. And whereas the system may not fully suit the genius of our people or meet the local conditions, its continued application and practice has made it intelligible to the common man. The very fact that increasing number of people are making resort to the courts for the resolution of their conflicts/disputes, indicates that the system enjoys a degree of legitimacy and acceptance.

2. Historical Retrospect

2.1 Hindu Period

The Hindu period roughly extends from 1500 BC until 1500 AD. Information on the judicial system during Hindu period has been somewhat sketchy, gathered mostly from scattered sources, such as ancient books like Dharamshastra, Smiritis and Arthashastra, and commentaries of the same by historians and jurists. These sources construct a well-defined system of administration of justice during the Hindu period. The King was regarded as the fountain of justice who also discharged judicial functions. In this task, judges as well as his ministers and counsellors assisted him. He was the final judicial authority and court of ultimate appeal. At the Capital, besides the King's Court, the Court of Chief Justice existed. This Court, in hierarchy, was next to the King's Court and appeal against its decisions lay to the King's Court. The judges were appointed on the basis of their qualifications and scholarship but the choice was mostly restricted to upper caste i.e. Brahmins.

At the village level, tribunals dispensed justice, consisting of the assembly of the village, or the caste or the family<sup>1</sup>. The village Headman acted as Judge/Magistrate for the community. Decisions by such tribunals were usually through conciliation. The decisions of village/town courts/tribunals were appealable in the higher courts and final appeal lay before the King's Court. Besides, judgment by the courts, the system of arbitration was also invoked.

As regards the procedure followed in the courts/tribunals, no formal rules existed, as the law applicable was not statutory but customary or moral. The determination of truth and punishment of the wrong-doer was regarded as a religious duty. Civil proceedings commenced with the filing of a claim which was replied to by the opposite party. Both parties were allowed to produce witnesses so as to prove their respective claims. On the conclusion of the trial, decision was pronounced which was duly enforced. It appears thus, that the system of administration of justice, as it operated in ancient India, was not substantially different from what it is in the modern times. In a sense, the current system seems to be a continuation of the former practices and procedures.

2.2 Muslim Period

The Muslim period in the Indian Sub-continent roughly begins in the 11th century A.D. This period may be divided into two parts i.e. the period of early Muslim rulers who ruled Delhi and some other parts of India and the Mughal Period, which replaced such Muslim and other rulers in 1526 A.D. The Mughal Dynasty lasted until the middle of 19th century.

During the period of Muslim rulers, the Islamic law generally held the field and remained the law of the land in settling civil and criminal disputes. However, common customs and traditions were also invoked in settling secular matters. These rulers were not particularly keen on applying the Islamic law to each and every sphere of life, and let the indigenous customs and institutions continue side by side with Islamic law and institutions. During this period, different courts were established and functioned at the central, provincial, district and tehsil (Pargana) level. These courts had defined jurisdiction in civil, criminal and revenue matters and operated under the authority of the King. On the top of judicial hierarchy was the King's Court, presided over by the King himself, exercising original as well as appellate jurisdiction. The King was the head of judicial administration and he made all appointments to judicial posts. Persons of recognised scholarship, known competence and high integrity were appointed to such posts. The judges held office during the pleasure of the King.

The Mughals improved upon the previous experience and created an organised system of administration of justice all over the country. Courts were created at each and every unit of the administrative division. At the village level, the Hindu system of Panchayats (Council of Elders) was retained, which decided petty disputes of civil and criminal nature, using conciliation and mediation as means of settling disputes. At the town level, there existed courts, presided over by Qazi-e-Parganah. Similarly, at the district (Sarkar) and provincial (Subah) level, courts of Qazis were established. The highest court at the provincial level was that of Adalat Nazim-e-Subah. Similarly, for revenue cases, officers known as Ameen were appointed at the town level. At the district level, revenue cases were dealt with by Amalguzar and at the provincial level by Diwan.

The Supreme Revenue Court was called, the Imperial Diwan. Side by side, with civil and revenue courts, criminal courts, presided over by Faujdar, Kotwal, Shiqdar and Subedar functioned.<sup>2</sup> The highest court of the land was the Emperor's Court, exercising original and appellate jurisdiction.

Although these courts generally exercised exclusive jurisdiction in different categories of cases, however, sometimes their jurisdiction was inter-mixed, in as much as, officers dealing with criminal cases were also required to act as revenue courts. Furthermore, whereas territorially these courts formed a concentric organisation, their jurisdiction was not always exclusive on the basis of territorial limits. Thus, a plaintiff may choose to file his suit in a town or a district or a province. The pecuniary jurisdiction of the courts was also not defined; hence, a case of higher value may be filed in a court of small town. Similarly, appellate jurisdiction existed but was not well defined. Thus, a plaintiff or a complainant, not satisfied with a decision, may file a second suit/complaint in another court. Such later court would decide the matter afresh, without indeed taking into consideration the earlier finding of the court.

The emperor made the judicial appointments and persons of high scholarship and good reputation were appointed to the posts. Instructions were given to the judges to be neutral and impartial; and complaints against them were taken seriously. Corrupt officials were removed. Consequently, the scales of justice were very high.<sup>3</sup>

The procedure followed in civil cases was not much different from the procedure, which is applicable today. On a suit being filed, the court summoned the opposite party to admit or deny the claim. Issues were framed in the presence of both the parties who were then required to produce evidence in support of their respective claims. Simple cases were decided, based on such evidence, however, in complicated cases, the judge may launch his own investigation into the matter.<sup>4</sup> Maximum effort was made to find the truth. On the conclusion of the proceedings, judgment was pronounced and duly executed. Litigants were allowed to present their cases either personally or through agents. Such agents were not exactly lawyers (in the modern sense of the term) but were fully conversant with the judicial procedure. An officer of the court called Mufti, attached to the court, made the interpretation of law.<sup>5</sup>

2.3 British Period

The East India Company was authorised by the Charter of 1623 to decide the cases of its English employees. The Company, therefore, established its own courts. The President and Council of the Company decided all cases of civil or criminal nature. The subsequent charters further expanded such powers. Thus, the Charter of 1661 authorised the Governor and Council to decide not only the cases of the Company employees but also of persons residing in the settlement. In deciding such cases, the Governor and the Council applied the English laws. As the character of the Company changed from one of a trading concern into a territorial power, newer and additional courts were established for deciding cases and settling disputes of its employees and subjects. The administration of justice was initially confined to the Presidency Town of Bombay, Calcutta and Madras. In view of the huge distances between these Towns and the peculiar conditions prevailing there, the administration of justice, which developed in these Towns, was not uniform. There were established two sets of courts, one for the Presidency towns and the other the Mufussil. The principal courts for the town were known as the Supreme Courts and Recorders Courts. These courts consisted of English judges and applied English laws. The English people, residing in such towns alone, were subject to their jurisdiction. The native inhabitants, who were mostly living in the Mufussil, were governed under separate courts called Sadar Dewani Adalat and Sadar Nizamat Adalat, dealing with civil and criminal cases respectively. Such courts applied the local laws and regulations.

The Supreme Court of Calcutta was established under the Regulating Act 1773. The Court consisted of a Chief Justice and other judges, exercising both civil and criminal jurisdiction. The Court could also issue certain prerogative writs. In 1798, Recorders Courts were established at Madras and Bombay with powers identical to the Supreme Court of Calcutta. Afterwards, the Recorders Court at Madras was substituted by the Supreme Court (under the Parliament Act 1800). A few years later, the Recorders Court at Bombay was also replaced by the Supreme Court (under the Parliament Act 1823). These new Courts had indeed the same composition, jurisdiction and powers as exercised by the Supreme Court of Calcutta.

The High Court Act 1861 abolished the Supreme Courts as well as the Sadar Adalats and in their place constituted the High Court of Judicature for each Presidency Town. This Court consisted of a Chief Justice and such other number of judges, not exceeding 15. The Act prescribed professional qualifications for such judges together with the mode of their appointment. Thus, it was provided that 1/3rd of the judges should be appointed from amongst the barristers with 5 years standing and 1/3rd from amongst the civil servants, having 3 years experience as a District Judge. The remaining 1/3rd seats were filled from amongst pleaders and members of subordinate judiciary, having 5 years experience. The judges were appointed by the Crown and held office during his pleasure. The High Courts exercised original as well as appellate jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters and were also required to supervise the functioning of the subordinate courts in their respective domain. Besides the Presidency Towns, High Courts were also established in Allahabad in 1866, Patna in 1919, Lahore in 1919 and Rangoon in 1936. The Sindh Chief Court was established under the Sind Courts Act 1926. Similarly, under the NWFP Courts Regulation 1931 and the British Baluchistan Courts Regulation 1939, the Court of Judicial Commissioner was created in each such area.

The Code of Civil Procedure 1908 created principal civil courts, namely, the Court of District Judge, the Court of Additional District Judge, the Court of Civil Judge and the Court of Munsif. Their territorial and pecuniary jurisdictions were also defined.

The Government of India Act 1935 retained the High Courts and also provided for the creation of a Federal Court.<sup>6</sup> The Federal Court was established in 1937. Its judges were appointed by the Crown and held office till completing the age of 65 years. The qualifications prescribed were, 5 years experience as a judge of a High Court or 10 years experience as a barrister or 10 years experience as a pleader in a High Court. The Act further provided that the judges of the Federal Court and High Courts should hold office during good health and behaviour, meaning they may not be removed except on the grounds of infirmity of mind or body or misbehaviour, only when on a reference made by the Crown, the Judicial Committee of Privy Council so recommends. The Federal Court exercised original, appellate and advisory jurisdiction.<sup>7</sup>

3. Post-Independence Evolution:

On independence, the Government of India Act 1935 was retained as a provisional Constitution. As a consequence, the legal and judicial system of the British period continued, of course, with due adaptations and modifications, where necessary, to suit the requirements of the new Republic. This way, neither any vacuum occurred nor any break resulted in the continued operation of the legal system. The judicial structure remained the same. The Lahore High Court continued to function and so did the Sindh Chief Court and the courts of Judicial Commissioner in NWFP and Baluchistan. A new High Court was set up at Dacca.<sup>8</sup> Similarly, a new Federal Court for Pakistan was also established.<sup>9</sup> The powers, authority and jurisdiction of the Federal Court and High Courts, as prescribed in the Government of India Act 1935, remained intact. The Government of India Act 1935 was amended in 1954 with a view to empower the High Courts to issue the prerogative writs.<sup>10</sup> The subsequent Constitutions i.e. 1956, 1962 and 1973 did not drastically alter the judicial structure or the powers and jurisdiction of the superior courts. The changes effected were, renaming the Federal Court as the Supreme Court by the 1956 Constitution and the upgradation of the Chief Court of NWFP and Judicial Commissioner Court of Baluchistan into full-fledged High Courts, by the 1973 Constitution. Later on, a new court called, Federal Shariat Court was created in 1980<sup>11</sup> with jurisdiction to determine, suo moto or on petition by a citizen or the Federal or a provincial Government, as to whether or not a certain provision of law is repugnant to the injunctions of Islam.<sup>12</sup>

4. Superior Judiciary

The Constitution of Pakistan deals with the superior judiciary in a fairly comprehensive manner and contains elaborate provisions on the composition, jurisdiction, powers and functions of these courts. The Constitution provides for the “separation of judiciary from the executive” and the “independence of judiciary”.<sup>13</sup> It entrusts the superior courts with an obligation to “preserve, protect and defend” the Constitution.<sup>14</sup> The qualifications of judges, their mode of appointment,<sup>15</sup> service conditions, salary, pension,<sup>16</sup> etc are also laid down in the Constitution. The remuneration of judges and other administrative expenditures of the superior courts are charged on the Federal/Provincial Consolidated Fund,<sup>17</sup> which means it may be discussed but cannot be voted upon in the legislature.

The Constitution also provides for the grounds as well as forum and procedure for the removal of judges of the superior courts.<sup>18</sup> The Supreme Judicial Council, consisting of the senior judges of the Supreme Court and High Courts, on its own or on a reference made by the President, may recommend the removal of a Judge on the ground of misconduct or physical or mental incapacity. Thus, the Constitution ensures the freedom, independence and impartiality of the superior judiciary.

The Supreme Court and High Courts have recently been given a degree of financial autonomy. This measure followed the Supreme Court ruling in the case of Government of Sind v Sharaf Faridi.<sup>19</sup> The Court held that the independence of judiciary also means the elimination of financial control of the Executive over the judiciary, and therefore, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and High Courts should be authorised to make re-appropriation of funds within the budgetary allocation, without the approval of Finance Ministry. The Court went on to elaborate that the Chief Justices would thus be competent to re-appropriate amounts from one head to another and may also create or abolish posts and upgrade or downgrade the same.<sup>20</sup>

This ruling came during the course of interpretation of Article 175(3) of the Constitution, which provides that “judiciary shall be separated progressively from the Executive within 14 years”. The Court held that as per such constitutional mandate, the functions of magistracy should be bifurcated and the judicial magistrates must be placed under the administrative control of the High Court. The Court fixed the 23rd of March 1994 as the last date for carrying out this measure. In its order dated 24th January 1996 on the review petition, the Supreme Court extended the said date to 23rd March 1996 and reiterated that separation must be effected by the due date and added that no request for further extension in time will be entertained. Consequently, through appropriate amendments in law, judicial magistrates were placed at the disposal of High Courts. Later, the Supreme Court in the cases of Al-Jehad Trust v Federation<sup>21</sup> and Asad Ali v Federation<sup>22</sup> further interpreted various provisions in the Constitution and clarified the procedure and qualifications for appointment to the Supreme Court and High Court and appointment of the Chief Justices of the said courts. This procedure was changed by the Constitution 18th & 19th (Amendments) Acts 2010. Before such amendments, the standing practice was that the Chief Justice of Pakistan used to recommend a panel to the President and the President would select a suitable judge from the said panel. Similarly, for the appointment of judges in the High Courts, the respective Chief Justice would forward a panel to the President which was routed through the Governor of the Province and Chief Justice of Pakistan. The recommendation of the Chief Justice was binding on the President, except for sound reasons to be recorded by the President.

The Parliament recently passed the 18th Constitution (18th Amendment) Act 2010, which is aimed, inter alia, at strengthening parliamentary system and improving central-province

relations. The Parliament in its wisdom also prescribed new fora and procedure for the appointment of judges. Cases of appointment in superior courts (i.e. Supreme Court, Federal Shariat Court, High Courts) are processed through two forums: one, Judicial Commission, headed by the Chief Justice of Pakistan and comprising senior judges of Supreme Court, Chief Justices and senior judges of High Courts as well as Attorney General for Pakistan, Federal and Provincial Law Ministers, representatives of the Federal and Provincial Bar Councils, etc. The Judicial Commission nominates names for each vacancy. Such nomination is forwarded to the Parliamentary Committee for confirmation. The Committee comprises eight members, four from National Assembly and four from Senate. The names confirmed are forwarded to the President, through the Prime Minister for appointment.

This amendment was challenged before the Supreme Court and examined by a 17-member bench, which decided unanimously to send a reference to the Parliament with certain recommendations to improve the process and procedure of appointment of judges. The Parliament graciously considered the reference and approved many a recommendations through the adoption of Constitution (19th Amendment) Act, 2010.

In the light of 18th and 19th amendments, judges of Supreme are appointed through the Judicial Commission which consists of Chief Justice of Pakistan as Chairman, four senior most judges of the Supreme Court, one former Chief Justice or judge of the Supreme Court, nominated by the Chairman in consultation with the four member judges for a period of two years, the Attorney General for Pakistan, the Federal Law Minister and a senior advocate, Supreme Court, nominated by the Pakistan Bar Council. Once the Judicial Commission approves a new name for appointment as the judge of the Supreme Court, it goes to an eight member Parliamentary Committee that has equal representation of the government and the opposition as well as of two houses i.e. National Assembly and Senate. This committee has two weeks to consider the nomination. If approved, the name is forwarded to the President through the Prime Minister, for appointment. The Parliamentary Committee, for reasons to be recorded, may not confirm the recommendation by three-fourth majority, in which instance, the decision is forwarded to the Commission through the Prime Minister and the Commission sends another nomination.<sup>23</sup> Notwithstanding the procedure provided in Article 175-A, the President has to appoint the most senior judge of the Supreme Court as the Chief Justice of Pakistan.

For appointment of Chief Justices and judges of Federal Shariat Court, the Chief Justice and most senior judge of the said court are added to the composition of the Judicial Commission, provided that for appointment of the Chief Justice, the most senior judge is excluded from such composition. Similarly, for appointment of Chief Justices and judges of High Courts, the Chief Justice and senior most judge of the respective High Court, provincial minister for law and an advocate of High Court (15 years standing), as nominee of the provincial bar council, are added to the composition of the Judicial Commission. However, for appointment of Chief Justice, the senior most judge is excluded from such composition. Just like appointments in the Supreme Court, the Chief Justices and judges of the Federal Shariat Court and High Courts are appointed by the President through their nomination by the Judicial Commission and confirmation by the Parliamentary Committee.

A system of accountability is an essential prerequisite of the independence of judiciary. Constitution of Pakistan prescribes such procedure in the form of Supreme Judicial Council. The Supreme Judicial Council is a unique institution, which comprises the senior most judges in judicial hierarchy and entrusted with the onerous responsibility of deciding complaints that are referred to it. The Supreme Judicial Council is comprised of the Chief Justice of Pakistan as Chairman, two most senior Judges of the Supreme Court and two most senior Chief Justices of High Courts as members. The Registrar, Supreme Court of Pakistan acts as its Secretary. On a reference received from President or through suo moto action, the Supreme Judicial Council investigates the matter and presents its finding to the President. If the Council decides that the Judge is incapable of performing the duties of office or is guilty of misconduct, and therefore should be removed from office, the President may order the removal of such judge. A judge

may not be removed from service except on the specified grounds and subject to the prescribed procedure.<sup>24</sup>

4.1 Supreme Court

The Supreme Court is the apex Court of the land, exercising original, appellate and advisory jurisdiction.<sup>25</sup> It is the Court of ultimate appeal and therefore the final arbiter of law and the Constitution. Its decisions are binding on all other courts.<sup>26</sup> The Court consists of a Chief Justice and other judges,<sup>27</sup> appointed by the President as per procedure laid down in the Constitution. An Act of Parliament has determined the number of judges. The number fixed at the moment is Chief Justice and 16 judges. There is also provision for appointment of acting judges as well as ad hoc judges in the court. A person with 5 years experience as a Judge of a High Court or 15 years standing as an advocate of a High Court is eligible to be appointed as judge of the Supreme Court.<sup>28</sup>

The Court exercises original jurisdiction in inter-governmental disputes,<sup>29</sup> be that dispute between the Federal Government and a provincial government or among provincial governments. The Court also exercises original jurisdiction (concurrently with High Courts) for the enforcement of fundamental rights, where a question of 'public importance' is involved.<sup>30</sup> The Court has appellate jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters.<sup>31</sup> Furthermore, the Court has advisory jurisdiction in giving opinion to the Government on a question of law.<sup>32</sup>

To provide an expeditious and inexpensive remedy in matters relating to infringements of Fundamental Rights enshrined in Chapter II of the Constitution, a Human Rights Cell has been established in the Court. The Cell functions under the direct supervision of the Hon'ble Chief Justice of Pakistan. It is mandated to expeditiously process the complaints and grievances received from the general public by post addressed to the Chief Justice, Supreme Court of Pakistan. Approximately, 250 letters/applications are received per day. In case the grievance is redressed, the matter is disposed of. Cases requiring hearing are however fixed in Court and decided. In this way, relief is provided to the poor and vulnerable section of society without going through the traditional protracted litigation process. The public interest litigation in this form paved way for bringing relief as well as statutory reforms in matters of general public importance, e.g., the enactment of the Bonded Labour System (Abolition) Act 1992, Human Organs and Tissues Act 2010, Prohibition of Kite Flying (Amendment) Act 2009, Prohibition of Smoking and Protection of Non Smokers Health Ordinance, 2002, etc.

The Court appoints its own staff and determines their terms and conditions of service.<sup>33</sup> The Supreme Court (Appointment of Officers and Servants and Terms of Service) Rules 1982 prescribe the qualification for and mode of appointment and promotion of staff together with penalties and procedure for disciplinary proceedings against them. The Court may also frame its own rules of procedure.<sup>34</sup> The Supreme Court Rules 1980 laid down detailed procedure for the filing of petitions and appeals and their processing through the Court.

As compared to the practice elsewhere in the world, particularly the United States and United Kingdom where fewer cases reach the apex court, the Supreme Court of Pakistan deals with cases far beyond its capacity to deal with. Its jurisdiction, original as well as appellate, is fairly wide. Besides entertaining civil and criminal appeals from the High Courts, the Court also hears appeals from the judgments against the Federal Shariat Court, Service Tribunals and some special courts. The Court also entertains cases of violation of Fundamental Rights under its original jurisdiction (Art 184(3)). As a consequence, there is always huge number of pending cases to dispose of. On 1st January, 2011, a total of 20234 cases were pending in the Supreme Court. Approximately, 14000 – 16000 cases (both petitions and appeals) are annually filed in the Court. Besides, around 30,000 applications/letters are annually received under Article 184(3) of the Constitution and processed by the Court. Obviously, the Court has a heavy workload. In an effort to reduce this backlog and to streamline the judicial system in the country and make it responsive to the present-day requirements of society, the National Judicial Policy was formulated in 2009. The major thrust of the Policy was on disposal of pending cases in the superior courts as well as sub-ordinate courts all over the country. The courts performed very well and achieved the targets set for disposal. During the one year of its operation (i.e. 10.06.2009 to 31.05.2010) the Supreme Court, Federal Shariat Court, all High Courts and all sub-ordinate courts in the country decided total 30,93,658 cases. The Policy worked well, made the people aware of their rights and motivated them to approach the courts for quick disposal of their cases.

To facilitate the litigant public and ensure prompt disposal of cases, the Court, except in very important cases, generally operates through benches. Benches have been constituted, and are functional, almost round the year. Besides its Principal Seat at Islamabad, there are 4 Branch Registries, one at each provincial metropolis. Whereas the constitution of Benches and their operation in various cities, facilitates the public and ensures prompt disposal of cases, this system does affect the quality of judgments and deprives the Court of collective wisdom, so very vital for the apex Court, dealing with important issues involving interpretation of law/Constitution. There is, therefore, perhaps a need to re-examine the wisdom of bench system. This is however not possible with the present workload and rising trend of institution of cases, due to wider jurisdiction of the Court.

4.2 High Courts

There is a High Court in each province and a High Court for the Islamabad Capital Territory. Each High Court consists of a Chief Justice and other puisne judges. The strength of Lahore High Court is fixed at 60, High Court of Sindh at 40, Peshawar High Court at 20, High Court of Baluchistan at 11 and Islamabad High Court at 7. Qualifications mentioned for the post of a Judge are, 10 years experience as an advocate of a High Court or 10 years service as a civil servant including 3 years experience as a District Judge or 10 years experience in a judicial office.<sup>35</sup> For the appointment of Judges of High Courts, the practice used to be that initially the Chief Justice of the concerned High Court prepared a list of candidates which was submitted to the President through the Governor of the province and Chief Justice of Pakistan. The President finally used to select judges from the said list. The recommendation of the Chief Justice of Pakistan and Chief Justice of the High Court were binding on the President, except for sound reasons to the contrary. The most senior judge would have legitimate expectancy of being appointed as the Chief Justice except for concrete and valid reasons, to be recorded by the President.

This procedure of appointment has been changed after the 18th and 19th amendments, as the judges of High Courts are now duly appointed by the Judicial Commission. Judicial Commission for the appointment of judges of High Courts consists of Chief Justice of Pakistan as Chairperson, four senior most judges of the Supreme Court, One former Chief Justice or a retired judge of the Supreme Court appointed in consultation with the four member judges for a period of two years, the Attorney General, the Federal Law Minister, Chief Justice of the High Court to which appointment is being made, most senior judge of that High Court, Provincial Minister for Law and an Advocate having not less than fifteen years standing to be nominated by the respective Bar Council for the period of two years. For appointment of Chief Justice, the requirement of "most senior judge of the High Court to which appointment is being made" is excluded. Once the Judicial Commission approves a new name for appointment as the judge of the High Court it goes to an eight member Parliamentary Committee that has equal representation of the government and the opposition as well as of two houses i.e. National Assembly and Senate. This committee has two weeks to review the recommendation after which, if the recommendation is approved, it goes to the Prime Minister who forwards the same to the President for appointment. The Parliamentary Committee, for reasons to be recorded, may not confirm the recommendation by three-fourth majority, in which instance the decision is forwarded to the Commission through the Prime Minister and the Commission then sends another nomination.

The Court exercises original jurisdiction in the enforcement of Fundamental Rights and appellate jurisdiction in judgments/orders of the subordinate courts in civil and criminal matters. A large number of cases are pending in various High Courts. In the Lahore High Court, a total of 130215 cases, in the High Court of Sindh, 37909 cases, in Peshawar High Court, 17451 cases and in the High Court of Balochistan, 5446 cases were pending on 1st January 2011. In the newly established Islamabad High Court, in early February 2011, a total of 10371 cases (both civil and criminal) were pending. Around 10,000 of such cases were transferred to it from Lahore High Court.

The Court supervises and controls all the courts subordinate to it.<sup>36</sup> It appoints its own staff<sup>37</sup> and frames rules of procedure for itself as well as courts subordinate to it.<sup>38</sup>

An extremely controversial provision in the Constitution had been the transfer of a judge from one High Court to another without his consent or after consultation with the Chief Justice of Pakistan or Chief Justices of the concerned High Courts.<sup>39</sup> The original 1973 Constitution made such a transfer subject to such consent as well as consultation. A proviso added by the Constitution (Fifth Amendment) Act 1976 empowered the President to order such transfer for a period not exceeding one year, and the President Order No. 14 of 1985 extended such period from one to two years. This lacuna has been deleted by the 18th Amendment and the Constitution has been restored to its original form. Now a judge of a High Court cannot be transferred without his consent and consultation by the President with the Chief Justice of Pakistan and Chief Justices of both High Courts.

4.3 Federal Shariat Court

The Court consists of 8 Muslim Judges including the Chief Justice.<sup>40</sup> Procedure for appointment of judges of Federal Shariat Court has been changed after 18th and 19th amendments as previously such judges were appointed by the President from amongst the serving or retired judges of the Supreme Court or a High Court or from amongst persons possessing the qualifications of a judge of the High Court. At present, judges of Federal Shariat Court are also appointed through Judicial Commission which comprises Chief Justice of Pakistan as Chairperson, four senior most Judges of the Supreme Court, One former Chief Justice or a retired judge of the Supreme Court appointed by the Chairperson in consultation with the four member judges for a period of two years, the Attorney General for Pakistan, the Federal Law Minister, Chief Justice of Federal Shariat Court and most senior judge of the Federal Shariat Court. For appointment of Chief Justice, however, the most senior judge of the Federal Shariat Court is excluded from the composition of the Commission. Once the Judicial Commission approves a new name for appointment as the judge of the Federal Shariat Court, it goes to an eight member Parliamentary Committee that has equal representation of the government and the opposition as well as of two houses. This Committee has two weeks to review the recommendation after which if the recommendation is approved, it goes to the Prime Minister who forwards the same to the President for appointment. The Parliamentary Committee, for reasons to be recorded, may not confirm the recommendation by three-fourth majority, in which instance the decision is forwarded to the Commission through the Prime Minister and the Commission sends another nomination.

Of the 8 Judges, 3 are required to be Ulema who are well versed in Islamic law. The Judges hold office for a period of 3 years and the President may further extend such period.<sup>41</sup>

The Court, on its own motion or through petition by a citizen or a government (Federal or provincial), may examine and determine as to whether or not a certain provision of law is repugnant to the injunctions of Islam.<sup>42</sup> Appeal against its decision lies to the Shariat Appellate Bench of the Supreme Court, consisting of 3 Muslim judges of the Supreme Court and not more than 2 Ulema, appointed by the President.<sup>43</sup> If a certain provision of law is declared to be repugnant to the injunctions of Islam, the Government is required to take necessary steps to amend the law so as to bring it in conformity with the injunctions of Islam. The Court also exercises appellate and revisional jurisdiction over the criminal courts, deciding Hudood cases.<sup>44</sup> The decisions of the Court are binding on the High Courts as well as subordinate judiciary.<sup>45</sup> The Court appoints its own staff<sup>46</sup> and frames its own rules of procedure.<sup>47</sup> On 1st January 2011, a total of 1848 cases were pending before the Court.

Ever since its establishment in 1980, the Federal Shariat Court has been the subject of criticism and controversy in the society. Created as an Islamisation measure by the Military Regime<sup>48</sup> and subsequently protected under the controversial 8th Amendment,<sup>49</sup> its opponents question the very rationale and utility of this institution. It is stated that this Court merely duplicates the functions of the existing superior courts. The composition of the Court, particularly the mode of appointment of its judges and the insecurity of their tenure, is taken exception to, and it is alleged, that this Court does not fully meet the criterion prescribed for the independence of the judiciary, hence, is not immune to pressures and influences from the Executive. In the past, this Court was used as a dumping ground for the recalcitrant judges. And whereas some of its judgments, particularly the ones which relying on the Islamic concept of equity, justice and fair play, expanded and enlarged the scope and contents of individual's rights were commended, others that validated the controversial Hudood Laws, in particular, the sentence of Rajam (stoning to death) are severely criticised and deplored. With the adoption of Protection of Women (Criminal Laws Amendment) Act, 2006 the jurisdiction of the Court is considerably curtailed inasmuch as, appeals/applications for revision arising out of trial of offences taken out from the Offence of Zina (Enforcement of Hudood) Ordinance, 1979 are no longer filed before the Court. They are filed before the High Court. In a recent verdict (Shariat Petition 1/1 of 2010), the Court sought to extend its jurisdiction to all matters mentioned as Hudood in the Islamic injunctions and further declared certain amendments to the Protection of Women (Criminal Law Amendment) Act 2006 as repugnant to the injunctions of Islam. Appeal against judgment of the Federal Shariat Court lies before the Supreme Court and are heard by 5 member Shariat Appellate Bench of the said Court.

5 Subordinate Courts

The subordinate judiciary may be broadly divided into two classes; one, civil courts, established under the West Pakistan Civil Court Ordinance 1962 and two, criminal courts, created under the Criminal Procedure Code 1898. In addition, there also exist other courts and tribunals of civil and criminal nature, created under special laws and enactments. Their jurisdiction, powers and functions are specified in the statutes creating them. The decisions and judgments of such special courts are assailable before the superior judiciary (High Court and/or Supreme Court) through revision or appeal. The provincial governments appoint the civil and criminal courts judges and their terms and conditions are regulated under the provincial civil servants acts/rules. The High Court, however, exercises administrative control over such courts. The civil courts consist of District Judge, Additional District Judge, Senior Civil Judge and Civil Judge Class I, II & III. Similarly, the criminal courts comprise of Session Judge, Additional Session Judge and Judicial Magistrate Class I, II & III. Law fixes their pecuniary and territorial jurisdictions. Appeal against the decision of civil courts lies to the District Judge and to the High Court, if the value of the suit exceeds specified amount. Similarly, in keeping with the quantum of penalty, appeals against criminal courts lie to Session Judge or High Court.

6. Special Courts and Tribunals

The Constitution authorises the federal legislature to establish administrative courts and tribunals for dealing with federal subjects.<sup>50</sup> Consequently, several special courts/tribunals have been created which operate under the administrative control of the Federal Government. Most of these courts function under the Ministry of Law & Justice, however, certain courts also operate under other ministries/departments. Such courts/tribunals include: Special Courts (Control of Narcotics Substances), Banking Courts (Recovery Loans), Special Courts (Offences in Banks), Special Courts (Customs, Taxation & Anti-Smuggling), Income Tax Appellate Tribunal, Environment Appellate Tribunal, Insurance Appellate Tribunal, Customs, Excise & Sales Tax Appellate Tribunal, Special Judges (Central), Drugs Courts, Anti-Terrorism Courts, Accountability Courts. Similarly, the provincial governments have their own special courts/tribunals, established under statutes. Such provincial courts/tribunals include Labour Courts, Consumer Protection Courts, Anti-Terrorism Courts and Anti-Corruption Courts. The judicial officers presiding over these courts are mostly appointed on deputation from the provincial judicial cadre.

Besides, there exist revenue courts, operating under the West Pakistan Land Revenue Act 1967. The revenue courts may be classified as the Board of Revenue, the Commissioner, the Collector, the Assistant Collector of the First Grade and Second Grade. The provincial government that exercise administrative control over them appoints such officers. Law prescribes their powers and functions.

6.1 Service Tribunals

Under Article 212 of the Constitution, the government is authorised to set up administrative courts and tribunals for exercising exclusive jurisdiction in matters, relating to the terms and conditions of service of civil servants. Accordingly, service tribunals, both at the centre and provincial level have been established and are functional. The members of these tribunals are appointed by the respective Government. Appeal against the decision of the Federal/Provincial Service Tribunals lies to the Supreme Court.

7. Procedural Law

The Code of Civil Procedure 1908 prescribes procedure for proceedings in civil cases. The Code is in two parts i.e. Sections, which contain the basic and fundamental principles and can be amended only by the legislature, and Schedules, which contain rules of procedure and can be amended by the High Court. The Code is indeed a consolidating statute, prescribing detailed procedure for instituting suit (meaning who may file a suit, how and where), pleadings (filing complaints/written statements, their form and particulars), proceedings, writing of judgment and execution of decrees, etc. The Code has been reviewed from time to time and its provisions amended to keep pace with time and changing conditions of the society. Similarly, the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 prescribes the criminal procedure. The Qanun-e-Shahadat Order 1984 prescribes the competency of witnesses, the examination of witnesses, form of evidence and the procedure for presenting the same, etc. The procedure prescribed in the law applies to judicial proceedings and investigations by a court of law in civil or criminal cases. The special courts follow the procedure prescribed in the above-mentioned codes, whereas some such courts follow special procedure laid down in the respective statutes.

8. Terms and Conditions of Service of subordinate Judiciary

The subordinate courts (civil and criminal) have been established and their jurisdiction defined by law.<sup>51</sup> They are supervised and controlled by the respective High Court.<sup>52</sup> The administration of justice, however, is a provincial subject and thus the subordinate courts are organised and the terms and conditions of service of judicial officers determined under the provincial laws and rules. The issues of recruitment, promotions and other terms and conditions of service together with disciplinary proceedings, etc are dealt with under the provincial civil servants acts and the rules framed thereunder. Until recently, the appointing authority for judicial officers happened to be the provincial government but with the separation of the judiciary from the executive, such authority has been transferred to the High Court.

Initial recruitment as Civil Judge-cum-Judicial Magistrate is made through the Provincial Public Service Commission with the active involvement of the High Court. For the provinces of Punjab, NWFP and Balochistan, recruitment is made through a competitive examination consisting of a written test and viva voce. In Sindh, however, such recruitment is made by the High Court itself through a written test followed by viva voce and the names of selected candidates are recommended to the Provincial Government for appointment.

A Committee of the judges of the High Court, decides the issue of promotion of judges. For appointment as Additional District & Sessions Judge, quota is fixed for service personnel as well as induction from the Bar. Appointment as District & Sessions Judge is by promotion on the basis of seniority-cum-fitness from among the serving judicial officers.

After appointment, the civil judges are usually attached for a few weeks to the Court of Senior Civil Judge/District & Sessions Judge to get practical training. They also receive specialised training at the Federal Judicial Academy and in the respective provincial academies. Such training is comprised of education in various substantive laws, court management, case processing, judicial procedure, and code of conduct, etc.

As mentioned earlier the High Courts exercise supervision and control over the functioning of the subordinate judiciary. Such supervision and control is both administrative as well as judicial. In the administrative sphere, disciplinary proceedings may be initiated against a judicial officer by the High Court. Judicial control is also exercised through revision and appeals being filed in the High Court against the orders/decisions of the subordinate courts. The High Court carries out its supervisory functions through inspections and calling of record from the courts. The Member Inspection Team (MIT) mostly deals with the issue; however, the Chief Justice of the High Court or any other judge deputed by the Chief Justice also carries out regular as well as surprise inspections. The Chief Justice is competent to initiate disciplinary action against a judge and take appropriate action in the matter.

Disciplinary proceedings against judicial officers are apparently initiated and action taken under the (provincial) Government Servants (Efficiency and Discipline) Rules. Such rules were primarily designed for the executive officers whose duties and functions are different from judicial officers. Certain High Courts have adopted codes of conduct for subordinate judiciary, but they are quite sketchy/ inadequate. Thus, in their application to judicial officers, the current rules do contain many gaps and anomalies. In particular, the rules are silent on how a judicial officer ought to conduct himself in and outside the court. There is, therefore, a need for preparing a separate comprehensive code of conduct for the members of the subordinate judiciary, covering their private and public life and in particular, their conduct in the court so as to maintain propriety and decorum in the court and enhance public confidence in the administration of justice.

As regards the grievances of the judicial officers with regard to the terms and conditions of service, mechanism exists for resolving it. There exists a Provincial Judicial Service Tribunal for deciding appeals against the final orders of departmental authority. The judges of the respective High Court man such tribunals. Appeal against their decision lies to the Supreme Court.

The subordinate judiciary in almost all the provinces operates under some constraints. There exists shortage of judicial officers, their supporting staff and equipment. The strength of subordinate judiciary has not kept pace with the rise in litigation due to which huge arrears of cases are piling up and there are enormous delays in deciding cases. As against the recommendations of several commissions and committees that the number of cases pending with a civil judge should not be more than 500 and the number of units pending with a District & Sessions Judge should not be more than 450 at a time, in actual practice the number of cases and units is far in excess of this prescribed limit. Thus, to alleviate the suffering of litigant public on account of delay, the National Judicial Policy Making Committee (headed by the Chief Justice of Pakistan with Justices of Federal Shariat and High Courts as members) launched on 1st June 2009 the National Judicial Policy. The Policy set targets for disposal of cases by the superior/subordinate courts. During one year of its operation the courts decided 31 lac cases as against fresh institution of 25 lac cases, thereby reducing the backlog by half of million.

There is still a backlog of civil and criminal cases at the level of subordinate judiciary in all provinces. On 1st January 2011, in the Province of the Punjab, the number of cases pending was 922523 (9,000 cases have been transferred to the Islamabad High Court). In the Province of Sindh, the number of pending cases was 98868, in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, the figure was 100545 whereas in Balochistan, it was 6730.

The Courts have performed well during the implementation period of National Judicial Policy i.e. 01-06-2009 to 31-05-2010 and achieved the targets set in the policy. During this one year the superior courts i.e. the Supreme Court, The Federal Shariat Court, and High Courts, in total, have decided 1,63,021 cases whereas in 2007 and 2008, 93,378 and 117,738 cases respectively were adjudicated upon which shows a rising trend in expeditions disposal of cases. Number of cases decided by the Lahore High Court is 53, 877, 74542 and 109422 in 2007, 2008 and during implementation period respectively, which clearly shows increased disposal of 34880 cases during 01-06-2009 to 31-05-2010 as compares to the disposal of cases in 2008. Similarly, in the High Court of Sindh, 18124 cases were decided in the policy implementation period which was previously 12493 and 16524 in 2007 and 2008 respectively. In the Peshawar High Court the disposal is 11627, 11556 and 13792 in 2007, 2008 and 01-06-2009 to 31-05-2010 respectively. Hence there is increased disposal of 2236 cases. In the High Court of Balochistan the disposal rate was 3297, 3627 and 3078 in 2007, 2008 and 01-06-2009 to 31-05-2010. Details of disposal figure by the superior and subordinate courts in given in the table below:

The discrepancy in figure between various High Courts is on account of variation between sanctioned and working strength and delays in the appointment of judges in such courts. Even though there is lack of basic infrastructure, Judicial and administrative staff and other paraphernalia, these results have been achieved within the existing resources. The strength of judges in the Supreme Court has come down from 29 to 18 following a ruling by this Court in the case of Sindh High Court Bar Association versus Federation of Pakistan whereas in High Courts and subordinate Courts whereas in High Courts and subordinate courts, the working strength of judges is far more less than the sanctioned strength. The 3rd pillar of the State is not getting even 1% of the total budgetary allocation of the federal and provincial governments. Notwithstanding the deficiency in strength and budgetary constraints, because of better performance, the institution of cases in courts is increasing, which is a sign of enhanced public confidence in the judiciary.
